Corporation

Diane Smith-Melloy's retail career includes working in various cities throughout the country for both Neiman Marcus and Saks Fifth Avenue.

A native of St. Louis, Smith-Melloy holds a BA from the University of Missouri-Columbia, and an MA from San Francisco State University. When she moved to Madison, Wisconsin in 2003, her past specialty store experience was easily transferred to the District Council of Madison Society of St. Vincent de Paul, where she worked as Senior Director of Retail Operations overseeing a centralized processing center and seven thrift stores.

Smith-Melloy has also served on the National Stores Committee and is currently the board Chair for the SVdP National Stores Corporation and Liaison to the National Board of Directors.

She retired (and is still uncomfortable with that word!) in fall of 2019. She now lives in Coronado, California with husband Joe.
